QUESTION PRESENTED

In Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678 (2001), this Court avoided constitutional concerns by interpreting 8 U.S.C. 1231(a)(6) to limit to a “reasonable time” the period that permanent resident aliens may be detained following final orders directing their removal from the United States. Applying that standard, the Court held that a resident alien generally may not be detained under Section 1231(a)(6) for more than six months after being ordered removed, if the alien demonstrates that there is not a significant likelihood of removal in the reasonably foreseeable future. The question presented in this case is whether Section 1231(a)(6) and Zadvydas compel the release of an arriving alien who was apprehended at the border of the United States, denied admission, and ordered removed from the United States.

SERGIO SUAREZ MARTINEZ

*ON PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI
TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT*

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI

The Solicitor General, on behalf of the Interim Field Office Director, Portland, Oregon, of United States Immigration and Customs Enforcement, Department of Homeland Security, and the Attorney General of the United States, respectfully petitions for a writ of certiorari to review the judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit in this case.¹

¹ On March 1, 2003, functions of several border and security agencies, including certain functions of the former Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS), were transferred to the Department of Homeland Security and assigned within that Department to the entity now known as United States Immigration and Customs Enforcement. See Homeland Security Act of

OPINIONS BELOW

The order of the court of appeals (App., infra, 1a) is unreported. The order of the district court (App., infra, 2a) is unreported.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the court of appeals was entered on August 18, 2003. On November 7, 2003, Justice O'Connor extended the time within which to file a petition for a writ of certiorari to and including December 16, 2003. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under 28 U.S.C. 1254(1).

STATEMENT

1. Respondent is one of approximately 125,000 Cuban nationals, many of them convicted of crimes in Cuba, who attempted to enter the United States illegally during the 1980 Mariel boatlift. After Cuba refused to accept the return of Mariel Cubans who were stopped at the border and denied entry into the United States, the Attorney General, through the Immigration 2002, Pub. L. No. 107-296, § 441(2), 116 Stat. 2192 (to be codified at 6 U.S.C. 251(2)). Petitioner Crawford is the successor to the INS District Director who was named as a respondent to the habeas corpus petition in the district court. The Attorney General also was named as a habeas corpus respondent in the district court. The position of the government, however, is that the Attorney General is not a proper habeas corpus respondent in this action concerning an alien's detention. See Roman v. Ashcroft, 340 F.3d 314, 318-327 (6th Cir. 2003); Vasquez v. Reno, 233 F.3d 688 (1st Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 816 (2001); Yi v. Maugans, 24 F.3d 500, 507 (3d Cir. 1994); but see Armentero v. INS, 340 F.3d 1058, 1061 (9th Cir. 2003) (determining that Attorney General is proper habeas respondent in "circumstances specific to the situation of immigration detainees"), petition for rehearing en banc pending, No. 02-55368 (9th Cir.).

and Naturalization Service, soon paroled all but a few hundred of those Cubans into this country pursuant to his discretionary authority under 8 U.S.C. 1182(d)(5) (1976 & Supp. IV 1980). See generally Fernandez-Roque v. Smith, 734 F.2d 576, 578-579 (11th Cir. 1984); Palma v. Verdeyen, 676 F.2d 100, 101-102 (4th Cir. 1982).

Section 1182(d)(5)(A) then authorized, and as amended continues to authorize, the Attorney General (now the Secretary of Homeland Security, see note 1, supra) to parole aliens applying for admission to the United States into the country “temporarily under such conditions as he may prescribe” and only for “urgent humanitarian reasons or significant public benefit,” but it provides that “such parole of such alien shall not be regarded as an admission of the alien.” 8 U.S.C. 1182(d)(5)(A). Section 1182(d)(5)(A) also provides that when, in the opinion of the Attorney General, the purposes of the alien’s parole have been served, the alien shall forthwith be returned to custody, “and thereafter his case shall continue to be dealt with in the same manner as that of any other applicant for admission to the United States.”

In 1984, the United States and Cuba reached an accord concerning immigration between the two countries, including the return to Cuba of 2746 specified individuals with serious criminal backgrounds or mental infirmities. See Immigration Joint Communiqué Between the United States of America and Cuba, Dec. 14, 1984, T.I.A.S. No. 11,057, 1984 WL 161941. Approximately 1652 Mariel Cubans have been repatriated to Cuba under the 1984 accord. The most recent repatriations occurred in October and December 2003. See generally Gisbert v. United States Attorney General, 988 F.2d 1437, 1439 n.4 (5th Cir. 1993) (discussing repatriations).

Pursuant to Section 1182(d)(5)(A), the Attorney General promulgated regulations in 1987 governing the parole and revocation of parole of Mariel Cubans (defined to include any native of Cuba who last came to the United States between April 15, 1980, and October 20, 1980) pending either an exclusion hearing or the alien's return to Cuba or another country. See 8 C.F.R. 212.12; 52 Fed. Reg. 48,802 (1987). Those regulations supplement the general regulations governing the parole and release of aliens who are seeking admission to the United States. See 8 C.F.R. 212.5, 241.4.

In 1990, Congress added a new statutory provision, 8 U.S.C. 1226(e) (1994), which limited the Attorney General's power to release certain excludable, criminal aliens on parole. See Immigration Act of 1990, Pub. L. No. 101-649, § 504(b), 104 Stat. 5050. Section 1226(e)(1) provided that, "[p]ending a determination of excludability, the Attorney General shall take into custody any alien convicted of an aggravated felony." 8 U.S.C. 1226(e)(1) (1994). Section 1226(e)(2) and (3) then provided that the Attorney General "shall not release such felon from custody" unless the Attorney General determined under 8 U.S.C. 1253(g) (1994) that the alien's country of removability would not accept his return and, inter alia, the Attorney General concluded, after review of the alien's request for release and the severity of the alien's felony, that "the alien will not pose a danger to the safety of other persons or to property." 8 U.S.C. 1226(e)(2) and (3) (1994). Section 1226(e) otherwise left unaffected the Attorney General's discretion to grant, deny, or revoke parole under Section 1182(d)(5)(A).

In the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 (IIRIRA), Pub. L. No. 104-208, Div. C, § 241, 110 Stat. 3009-546, Congress added a new Section 1231 to Title 8 of the United States Code. Section 1231(a)(2) requires the detention, during the statutory 90-day removal period, of aliens who have been ordered removed from the United States, including aliens who have been stopped at the border and were regarded as “excludable” under prior law.² Section 1231(a)(6) then provides that an alien ordered removed who is inadmissible under 8 U.S.C. 1182 or deportable for the commission of a specified crime, or who has been determined by the Attorney General to be a risk to the community or unlikely to comply with the order of removal, “may be detained beyond the [90-day] removal period.”

2. In June 2001, this Court decided Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678, which addressed the legality of the continued detention under 8 U.S.C. 1231(a)(6) of aliens who initially had been granted the status of lawful permanent residents and later were ordered removed, but who could not be removed within the 90-day statutory removal period. The Court construed Section 1231(a)(6) “to contain an implicit ‘reasonable time’

² Before IIRIRA, aliens subject to removal from the United States were divided into two statutory categories. Aliens seeking admission and entry into the United States were “excludable.” See Landon v. Plasencia, 459 U.S. 21, 25, 28 (1982); 8 U.S.C. 1182 (1994). Aliens who had gained lawful admission to the United States or entered without permission were “deportable.” See 8 U.S.C. 1251 (1994). Under IIRIRA, the new statutory category of “inadmissible” aliens includes both aliens who have not entered the country and formerly were termed “excludable,” and aliens who entered the United States without permission and formerly were termed “deportable.” See 8 U.S.C. 1182(a).

limitation.” 533 U.S. at 682. In particular, to avoid “a serious constitutional problem,” id. at 690, that would arise from indefinite detention of the former permanent resident aliens, the Court construed the Attorney General’s authority to detain such aliens under Section 1231(a)(6) to be limited to the period of time reasonably necessary to remove them from the United States. Id. at 689. After that point, the Court reasoned, “detention no longer ‘bears a reasonable relation to the purpose for which the individual was committed.’” Id. at 690 (quoting Jackson v. Indiana, 406 U.S. 715, 738 (1972) (brackets omitted)). “[F]or the sake of uniform administration,” the Court further determined that detention for a period of six months is presumptively reasonable. Zadvydas, 533 U.S. at 701. After that presumptively reasonable period, if “the alien provides good reason to believe that there is no significant likelihood of removal in the reasonably foreseeable future, the Government must respond with evidence sufficient to rebut that showing.” Ibid.

The Court emphasized in Zadvydas that “[a]liens who have not yet gained initial admission to this country would present a very different question,” which was not before the Court. 533 U.S. at 682. Furthermore, in its analysis of the potential constitutional problem posed by detention of deportable permanent resident aliens, the Court rejected the United States’ reliance on Shaughnessy v. United States ex rel. Mezei, 345 U.S. 206 (1953), even though that case “involve[d] indefinite detention.” 533 U.S. at 693. In Mezei, the Court held that the detention of an alien who unsuccessfully sought entry into the United States but could not be removed did not violate due process. See 345 U.S. at 210-216. In Zadvydas, the Court stated that Mezei “differs from [Zadvydas] in a critical respect,” because Mezei’s detention on Ellis Island was a continuation of his exclusion rather than a successful entry into the United States. 533 U.S. at 693. The Court noted that aliens stopped at the border remain applicants seeking initial admission to the United States even if they are physically present in the country. Ibid. Mezei's status as an excludable alien at the border, the Court explained in Zadvydas, "made all the difference." Ibid.

3. In this case, the Ninth Circuit—in conflict with a majority of the circuits that have addressed the issue, but in agreement with the Sixth Circuit—determined that Zadvydas's six-month rule requires the release from detention of an inadmissible Mariel Cuban with an extensive criminal history.

a. In June 1980, respondent arrived near Key West, Florida, and was prevented from entering the United States. Later that month, the INS granted respondent temporary immigration parole pursuant to 8 U.S.C. 1182(d)(5)(A). Gov't Supp. Mot. to Hold in Abeyance These Proceedings Pending Disposition of the Petition for Rehearing En Banc of Xi v. INS and the Accompanying Mot. for Expedited Consideration of the Pet., Attach. A at 2 (filed Sept. 9, 2002) (Gov't D. Ct. Supp. Mot.); see Resp.'s Sworn Statement in Exclusion Proceedings (dated 6/20/80) (contained in respondent's agency file). Respondent was convicted of numerous crimes while he was on immigration parole. In 1983, respondent was convicted of assault with intent to murder and sentenced to three years of probation. Gov't C.A. Resp. to Mot. for Summary Affirmance and Request for Summary Disposition 3 (filed July 10, 2003) (Gov't C.A. Resp.). Later in the 1980s, respondent was convicted of additional crimes including burglary. Ibid.; Gov't D. Ct. Supp. Mot. Attach. B at 37. In October 1996, respondent was convicted in California of petty theft with a prior conviction and, following the revocation of his parole for that offense, was sentenced to two years of imprisonment. Id. at 22, 23. In July 1998, respondent was convicted in California of assault with a deadly weapon other than a firearm and sentenced to three years of imprisonment. Id. at 12. In July 1999, he was convicted in California of attempted oral copulation by force and sentenced to two years of imprisonment. Id. at 1.

In December 2000, the INS revoked respondent's immigration parole and commenced removal proceedings against him based on his criminal convictions and his lack of valid documents for entering the United States. Gov't C.A. Resp. 3-4; Gov't D. Ct. Supp. Mot. 3 and Attach. A at 1-2. In January 2001, an immigration judge determined that respondent is removable and ordered him removed to Cuba. Respondent waived an administrative appeal. Gov't C.A. Resp. 4; Gov't D. Ct. Supp. Mot. Attach. C at 1.

As required by the parole regulations applicable to Mariel Cubans, see 8 C.F.R. 212.12(g), the INS (now United States Immigration and Customs Enforcement, see note 1, supra) has reviewed respondent's custody status on an annual basis. After each review, respondent has been found ineligible for re-parole, as a potentially violent person and a threat to the community if released. Gov't C.A. Resp. 4; see 8 C.F.R. 212.12(d).

b. In July 2002, respondent challenged his detention in a habeas corpus petition filed under 28 U.S.C. 2241 in the United States District Court for the District of Oregon. App., infra, 3a. In August 2002, while respondent's habeas corpus petition was pending, the Ninth Circuit held in Lin Guo Xi v. INS, 298 F.3d 832 (2002), "that Zadvydas applies to inadmissible individuals" who have been stopped at the border, denied admission, and ordered removed from the United States under the post-1996 immigration laws, id. at 836, and, therefore, the detention of such aliens is subject to the reasonable-time limitation and six-month presumption established by this Court in Zadvydas, see id. at 839-840.

On October 30, 2002, the district court granted respondent's habeas corpus petition and ordered the government to release respondent, subject to reasonable conditions. App., infra, 2a. On March 31, 2003, following the imposition of conditions of parole and identification of appropriate community placement, see 8 C.F.R. 212.12(f), respondent was released from detention. Gov't C.A. Resp. 5.

c. The court of appeals, citing its decision in Lin Guo Xi, supra, summarily affirmed the district court's decision ordering respondent's release. App., infra, 1a.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE PETITION

The question in this case is whether the reasonable-time limitation and six-month presumption that this Court articulated in Zadvydas v. Davis, 533 U.S. 678 (2001), or, alternatively, 8 U.S.C. 1231(a)(6) itself, compels the release of arriving aliens like respondent, who have been apprehended at the border, denied admission to the United States, and ordered removed. A petition for a writ of certiorari that presents the same issues under Zadvydas and Section 1231(a)(6), in the context of an alien who was ordered removed before the enactment of the 1996 immigration amendments, is pending in Benitez v. Wallis, No. 03-7434 (filed Oct. 14, 2003), which arises from the Eleventh Circuit.

The courts of appeals are divided on the question whether Zadvydas's limitation on the duration of post-removal-order detention under Section 1231(a)(6) applies to aliens who have been stopped at the border and denied admission. The Sixth Circuit and the Ninth Circuit apply Zadvydas's six-month rule to limit the detention of such aliens when there is not a significant likelihood they will be removed in the reasonably foreseeable future. See Martinez-Vazquez v. INS, 346 F.3d 903 (9th Cir. 2003) (excludable Mariel Cuban); Arango Marquez v. INS, 346 F.3d 892 (9th Cir. 2003) (same); Rosales-Garcia v. Holland, 322 F.3d 386 (6th Cir.) (en banc) (same), cert. denied, 123 S. Ct. 2607 (2003); Lin Guo Xi v. INS, 298 F.3d 832 (9th Cir. 2002) (inadmissible alien ordered removed under post-1996 law).

The Third, Fifth, Eighth, and Eleventh Circuits, by contrast, have determined that Zadvydas does not limit the detention of arriving aliens who have been denied admission into the United States. See Sierra v. Romaine, 347 F.3d 559 (3d Cir. 2003); Benitez v. Wallis, 337 F.3d 1289 (11th Cir. 2003), petition for cert. pending, No. 03-7434 (filed Oct. 14, 2003); Borrero v. Aljets, 325 F.3d 1003 (8th Cir. 2003); Rios v. INS, 324 F.3d 296 (5th Cir. 2003). Similarly, the Tenth Circuit has stated after Zadvydas that Section 1231(a)(6) preserves agency discretion whether to deny immigration parole to an excluded Mariel Cuban. Sierra v. INS, 258 F.3d 1213, 1219 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1071 (2001). See also Hoyte-Mesa v. Ashcroft, 272 F.3d 989 (7th Cir. 2001) (rejecting, after Zadvydas, due process challenge to Mariel Cuban's detention), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 846 (2002).

The government has suggested that the petition in Benitez should be granted. The government's brief in Benitez (at 21) further explains that this Court's construction of 8 U.S.C. 1231(a)(6) (and 8 U.S.C. 1182(d)(5)(A)) in that case would govern the detention of aliens, like respondent in this case, who were denied admission and ordered removed under post-1996 law.

The petition in this case therefore should be held pending the Court's disposition of Benitez and disposed of in accordance with the Court's decision in that case.

CONCLUSION

The petition for a writ of certiorari should be held pending this Court's disposition of the petition in Benitez v. Wallis, petition for cert. pending, No. 03-7434 (filed Oct. 14, 2003), and then should be disposed of as appropriate in light of the final disposition of that case.

Respectfully submitted.
